TELEVISION

- Special: Hollywood actor Clint Eastwood helps Channel 9's Hey Hey It's Saturday team premiere the Warner Brothers Movie World Theme Park on the Gold Coast, at 6.30pm on Saturday. The Bugs Bunny Show and host Sophie Lee will spend the next two weeks inside the multi-million-dollar complex, starting 5pm on Monday.
- Charity: A group of Ten Network personalities host this year's World Vision 40 Hour Famine, a 30-minute special screening at 5pm on Sunday. Highlighting work in Sudan, Mozambique and Vietnam are, among others, Greg Evans, Vince Sorrenti, Alyssa Jane Cook, Tina Arena and Richard Huggett.
- Talk: ABC's Peter Couchman meets Palestinians living in Israeli-occupied territories to hear their views on the latest United States bid to bring peace to the region. Many had to obtain special permission to appear on the show, airing 9.30pm on Wednesday, and had to return home before their curfew took effect.
- Sport: The Australian Socceroos take on England in the first match of the international soccer tour, live from Sydney Football Stadium, at 7.30pm on Saturday. The Adelaide Crows play away to Geelong, live on Channel 7, 1.30pm on Saturday. Channel 9 presents the 1991 Indy Car Race, from the United States, 3.30am on Tuesday.

CINEMA

Director Brian de Palma has changed just about every character from Tom Wolfe's book, The Bonfire of the Vanities, on which the film of the same name is based, but the result is still a remarkable, cynical, comical portrait of life in a giant metropolis. Americans aren't capable of commenting rationally on this film, screening at Academy Cinemas in the city.

RECORD

Faith No More shook some life into the rock scene last year with its explosive second album The Real Thing. Now fans can enjoy some of those songs in Live at the Brixton Academy. Paton's vocals suffer slightly in the live presentation but the musical beds are even more powerful (especially in the rhythm section) without sacrificing any melody. Highlights are Epic, Goin' to Pieces, We Care a Lot and a menacing rendition of Black Sabbath's song War Pigs.

RADIO

Out on Wednesday is a new concert series of contemporary music being broadcast by ABC-FM from next week. The first show is a recording of folk singer Michelle Shocked performing last month with The Messengers (Paul Kelly's regular backing band). It will go to air at 8pm. Future Out on Wednesday shows will feature other acts performing in Australia, including the John McLaughlan Trio and Afro-American choir Sweet Honey in the Rock.
